¹ NOTE: Some of these sanctions apply to the entire listed country (e.g., Cuba, Iran). In other cases, the sanctions apply only to Specially Designated Nationals or other specified persons or entities (e.g., Western Balkans, Ivory Coast)

² State Department Terrorist Countries (T-5) (note that Iraq and Libya are no longer considered countries which cooperate with terrorists). In addition, the State Department has identified Venezuela as a country that is not fully cooperating with U.S. anti-terrorism efforts, and has announced a policy of denying future license applications under the ITAR, and revoked all existing licenses under the ITAR. The Commerce Department has not revised the EAR to reflect the State Department's changed treatment of Venezuela, but Commerce may revise the EAR in the future to add Venezuela to the list of countries for which licenses are required for exports of items that are controlled for anti-terrorism reasons (AT-controlled).

³ For Iraq, non-lethal military equipment, lethal military equipment going to the reconstituted Iraqi army and police force, and small arms for private security purposes are excepted.

⁵ For Afghanistan, shipments to the Government of Afghanistan and the International Security Assistance Force are excepted.

⁶ For Eritrea, items supporting U.S. anti-terrorism, counter-terrorism, and de-mining programs; U.N. or other peacekeeping operations; or U.S. commitments under international conventions are excepted.
